Advantages of Social Media

Connectivity

Social Media helps us to connect with others who share similar values and interests. Regardless of where in the world they are or what their religion is. The beauty of communication on Social Media is that we can explore new ideas, compare opinions, and share our thoughts when desired, all from the comfort of our computer screen.

Education

Social Media provides a lot of benefits in the field of education. It is easy to learn from others who are experts and professionals through social media. Students can follow anyone to learn and enhance their knowledge about any field. Despite the location and educational background, one can educate yourself without paying for it.

Assistance

You can share your concerns with the community to receive assistance and happiness. Whether in terms of money or advice, you can get it from the community you are connected with.

Information and Updates

Posting anything about what you are thinking, feeling, or doing is one of the positive aspects of social media. Television and other forms of traditional media often show only one perspective, so it can be hard to get a complete understanding. One of the various benefits of using Social Media is that it contains various perspectives while still being entertaining.

Promotion

Is your business offline or online? Either way, you can promote it to the world. Once you've connected with the right audience, it becomes less expensive and will make for more profitable marketing in the digital age.

Noble Cause

People also use social media to promote a noble cause. For example, an NGO can use it for marketing social welfare and donation programs. Those who donate money or goods receive quick feedback, increasing contributions.

Awareness

Social media has helped people live more innovatively. From farmers, teachers, students to lawyers, every individual in society can benefit from social media communication and the way it helps spread awareness.

Helps Govt and Agencies Fight Crime

Furthermore, social media has also proven to be a valuable technology in catching and arresting criminals. The ability to track people through their online accounts - such as Facebook profiles or Twitter handles - is an invaluable asset used by various government agencies.

Improves Business Reputation

Positive exposure and feedback on social media can help any business with sales and marketing. Positive words shared even for a single occasion are enough to drive customers into investing in the company.

Helps in Building Communities

With different religions and beliefs worldwide, one can use social media to build a community of similar believers and members freely to discuss their religion and share topics related to it.

Disadvantages of Social Media

Cyberbullying

According to a report by PewCenter.org, many children have become victims of cyberbullying over the past few years. Since anyone can create a false account and harass people anonymously, it has become relatively easy for bullies to contact and threaten others on the internet. Anyone can send Threats, intimidation, words, and false news through mass networks like email or text messaging to generate discomfort in society, which in turn causes about 1 out of 20 people who commit suicide due to bullying.

Hacking

Some of the negative risks associated with social media networks are that personal data can be hacked and shared on the internet. Similarly, identity theft is another negative issue that can result in financial losses for anyone's accounts.

Several times people have had their Twitter or Facebook account hacked, having specific individuals' post has caused great harm to those involved. To avoid such accidents, it would be wise to keep your data and information safe by not sharing too much over social media networks.

Addiction

The addictive part of social media is alarming and can affect personal life. Teenagers are the most affected by such addiction. They get involved very extensively and eventually cut back from society. Such kind of addiction wastes individual time that you could otherwise use for productive tasks and activities.

Fraud and Scams

The lack of a regulatory framework to monitor and stop these fraudulent activities has led many people with their social media accounts being hacked. These attacks are prevalent, as anyone can do them without the victim knowing that this is happening until it's too late.

A whole lot of people have been scammed on Facebook in recent times. The scammer will send an email or news requesting payment for goods never received. It leaves the recipient feeling vulnerable and confused about what just happened to them.

Security Issues

Privacy is an integral part of social networks. With many people using the internet to access their accounts and post what they would like, there are risks involved that may not have been accounted for at first glance.

Security agencies now have access to social media accounts which can pose a problem for privacy. There are always risks when posting things online with these agencies looking in.

Reputation

Social media can easily ruin someone's reputation by creating false news and spreading it across social networks. Similarly, businesses can also suffer due to a bad reputation being conveyed over social media pages.

Cheating and Relationship Issues

Many couples have also used social networks as a means to propose and marry each other. However, after some time, they've realized that their decision has been incorrect, and they must part ways. Similarly, some couples have also cheated on one another by showing fake feelings or news (both of which could be false).

Health Issues

The excessive use of social networks can affect your mental and physical health in the following ways. First, individuals who would typically exercise routinely may give it up given that they are no longer as motivated with so much available distraction on their devices.

Second, people spend an increasing amount of time indoors and away from fresh air, which has shown to leave a negative effect on mental health.

Social Media causes death.

Not just by using social media, but by watching the stunts and other pointless stuff shared online. For example, bikers performing dangerous actions, people jumping over trains, and other life-threatening things. Many teenagers do these types of things because they've seen these successful videos from social media.

Glamorizes Drugs and Alcohol

One of the popular negative effects of social media sites is that people start following others who are wealthy or addicted to drugs and alcohol and share their views on the web. Therefore, with the use of social media, people today are heavily influenced to take drugs and drink for the sake of being "cool."
